Arbitration: Son Lacked Legal Authority To Sign For The Patient.

he patient was admitted to long-term care after the onset of paraplegia from a subarachnoid hemorrhage.

paperwork, including an alternative dispute attested that he was duly authorized to sign to arbitration rather than jury trial, pursuant as the patient's legal representative.

a durable power of attorney appointing the emergency department. same son as her attorney-in-fact. The document she signed expressly gave the son authority to sign an arbitration agreement on his mother's behalf.

After the patient died, the son sued the facility as personal representative of his mother's probate estate.

The facility defended by asking the court to order arbitration.

The son had no legal authority to sign an arbitration agreement.

There is no evidence that the mother's signing a durable power of attorney after the fact was intended by her to ratify the arbitration agreement signed earlier by her son, which she did not even know he had signed allegedly on her behalf.

COURT OF APPEALS OF GEORGIA November 7, 2014

the alternative dispute resolution agree- tract when he signed it. ment was not valid. The son had no legal authority to sign it for his mother.

did the son's having signed the arbitration elderly man in very poor health was able to agreement prevent him from filing a civil tive. McKean v. GGNSC, __ S.E. 2d __, 2014 ville v. Bevins, __ S.W. 3d WL 5784474 (Ga. App., November 7, 2014).

Arbitration: Patient Lacked Mental Capacity To Sign A Legal Contract.

he eighty-five year-old end-stage re-L nal disease patient was in the hospital for placement of a dialysis catheter when rehab. Her adult son signed the admission he fell out of bed and broke his neck.

resolution agreement. The son's signature lawsuit by asking the court to refer the case stand a legal agreement printed in English. to the arbitration agreement the patient and Spanish went over the admissions pa-Nineteen days later the patient signed signed during his admission through the perwork with her and had her sign every-

> It is elementary law that capacity, both legal and mental, is a necessary element of a legal contract like an agreement to arbitrate.

While the hospital physician certainly may have found the patient was alert, awake, oriented and cooperative at the time of examination, what constitutes being alert, oriented and communicative for medical purposes is not necessarily coextensive with being alert, oriented and communicative for legal matters.

COURT OF APPEALS OF KENTUCKY October 24, 2014

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky ruled the arbitration agreement was not Spanish vs. English language barrier. That valid. The patient lacked sufficient mental The Court of Appeals of Georgia ruled capacity to enter into a complex legal con-department physician's note that the pa- decisions and unable to manage his or her The power of attorney signed by the tient was alert, oriented and communica- own financial resources or resist fraud or mother after the fact did not matter. Nor tive was not the final word on whether this undue influence. , 2014 WL 5420002 (Ky. App., October 24, 2014).

Arbitration: Patient Lacked Mental Capacity To Sign A Legal Contract.

he eighty year-old patient was admit-L ted to skilled nursing care for stroke

The patient spoke only Spanish and The hospital defended the family's could not read English, let alone under-

> Her daughter who is fluent in English thing, except the arbitration agreement.

> Three days later a facility employee, without the daughter present, spoke with the patient in Spanish and got her to sign the arbitration agreement, apparently without explaining it to her.

> The patient sued for allegedly substandard treatment. The facility defended by insisting the court order arbitration.

A person lacks mental capacity to sign a legal contract if the person is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or unable to resist fraud or undue influence. CALIFORNIA COURT OF APPEAL

November 6, 2014

The California Court of Appeal ruled the patient did not have the legal capacity to sign a contract, which meant the arbitration agreement she signed was not valid.

The Court did not take issue with the is not grounds for a court to void an otherwise valid legal contract.

Instead, one of the tests for legal inca-The Court ruled that the emergency pacity is that the person is unable to make

The facility's own assessment of the understand and voluntarily agree to a com- patient indicated that due to her recent suit, rather than requesting arbitration, after plex legal document like the arbitration stroke and the meds she was taking she he became the probate personal representa- agreement that was presented to him. Pike- was unable to make decisions or to manage her own affairs. Rodriguez v. Windsor, 2014 WL 5765084 (Cal. App., November 6, 2014).

Legal Eagle Eye Newsletter for the Nursing Profession

December 2014 Page 6

More legal Information for nurses is available at Legal Eagle Eye Newsletter for the Nursing Profession Home Page.